College honors outstanding students

Outstanding students and student-athletes were honored April 8 at the annual Honors Convocation in Clarke Chapel. After the ceremony, a reception sponsored by the Women of Lycoming was held in Burchfield Lounge of the Wertz Student Center.

The Chieftain Award, the college's most prestigious honor, went to David G. Argall, a senior from Nesquehoning, Pa. The award is given to the student who, in the view of the faculty and students, contributes "the most to Lycoming College through support of school activities; who has exhibited outstanding constructive leadership qualities; who has evidenced a good moral code, and whose academic rank is in the upper half of the class.

Dr. Frederick E. Blumer, college president, presented the award to Argall. The president also reviewed his achievements during his four years at Lycoming. Argall made the dean's list five of seven terms, majoring in political science and international studies.

The top athletic honors, the Tomahawk, Pocahontas and Sol "Woody" Wolf Awards, went to D. Mark Fultz, Laurie J. Shea and Mark Dugan, respectively. Fultz, a senior

College fees going up

Increases in tuition and room and board fees totaling $590 were announced March 5 by Dr. Frederick E. Blumer, president. The increases will bring the cost of attending Lycoming College in 1980-81 to $5,490.

Tuition was raised from $3,300 to $3,720 per year. The room rate was raised from $770 to $850. The board rate was hiked from $830 to $920 per year. Together, the increases amount to a 12 percent hike over 1979-80 charges.

In announcing the increases in a letter to students' parents and in a news release a day later, Dr. Blumer said: "I always regret having to increase charges. This is one of the hardest decisions I have to make as president."

Still, the increase is lower than the 1979 inflation rate of 13.3 percent and lower than increases announced by many other colleges and universities with which the college competes for students, he said.

A comparison of the 1980-81 rates with the 1970-71 rates also shows that over the last decade the cost of attending Lycoming has risen slower than the cost of living and the rise in disposable personal income (DPI).

Hilltop Gymnasium: Buzzer sounds on sports era at old gym

By Craig A. Hornberger, '82

When the buzzer sounded to end the women's basketball game against Drew University Feb. 26, it also marked the end of inter-collegiate sports in old Hilltop Gymnasium on campus.

The old gym, once heralded as "the most attractive and complete of its kind in the state," will be replaced by the new Physical Education and Recreation Center next fall.

Hilltop spanned an era of sports at Lycoming College that began back in the days of the two-handed set shot and hightop sneakers. Its cornerstone was laid in June, 1923, when Lycoming was still Dickinson Seminary. Students and faculty waited eagerly as the new building began to rise.

According to the architect's original design, the projected cost was $125,000—a substantial amount in those days. Its actual cost was $155,000 about which President John W. Long said: "We could have built a building which would have cost less than the present gymnasium, but I do not see how we could have built the building in which has gone nothing but the best."

"Wonderfully complete and architecturally perfect" were the words of Bishop William F. McDowell during the dedication ceremony held Nov. 8, 1924. Dr. J. M. Gray, an 1896 graduate of Dickinson Seminary and pastor of Elm Park Methodist Church in Scranton, delivered the principle address at the dedication. The new facility received nothing but praise:

LANDMARKS AND THE WINDS OF CHANGE

What is the landmark of Lycoming College now that Old Main is gone? What building first comes to your mind when someone mentions Lycoming to you? Responses I have received to these questions are revealing.

Occasionally, alumni will mention Hilltop Gym as they reminisce. Others have stories about Rich Hall, but most think immediately of Clarke Chapel. It is a beautiful symbol of Lycoming College, serving also as a model among college landmarks across America. It was not coincidence that Longines selected a photograph of Clarke Chapel for the cover of their recent photograph album of college songs.

Fifty years from now, the new physical education/recreation center, to be dedicated next fall, may be regarded as a campus landmark when the class of 1981 recalls the first game played there. That class will also remember the final games in Hilltop Gym.

Frederick S. Blumer

But for the class of 1981, like so many classes before them, Clarke Chapel will remain the landmark and symbol of Lycoming College.

We've all heard wonderful stories about Old Main and the Angel Factory--Eveland Hall--or anecdotes about the dragon room in Bradley. It was painful to see Old Main and Eveland go and the discomfort will be repeated when Bradley goes down this summer. But 19th Century facilities can't be expected to serve well as we plan for the twenty-first. We can be grateful we have Clarke Chapel to serve as the architectural bridge to an era preserved now by faded photographs and youthful memories.

The Lycoming campus is a beautiful place, enchanted by spirits and images from the past. It is also a place where new architecture heralds curricular innovation and institutional development. Lycoming is changing. But how reassuring it is to be able to view this change from the windows of Clarke Chapel!

Ancient Bradley Hall is coming down. The executive committee of the board of trustees has approved the razing of the dilapidated structure, which hasn't been used for many years. Although a date for its demolition has not been set, the building will be coming down before next September.

"The gym floor is so spacious and so clear overhead to such a great height, the seating capacity for the spectators along the sides is so large, the swimming pool is so inviting, the bowling alleys so much in demand, the locker rooms and shower baths so commodious..."

The first athletic contest in the gym was held Jan. 17, 1925. The seminary basketball team defeated Keystone Academy, 39-10, in the first game of the season. Coach Cary Swartz's team went on to post a 6-6 record that first season.

Hilltop originally was designed for more than sports events. At the east end, an 18 by 40 foot stage was erected. It has since been dismantled and replaced by bleachers.

In June, 1925, the first commencement was held in the gymnasium. Later that same night, the senior class play put on its play, "Tilly of Bloomsbury." The entire day was described in the yearbook as "a big success."

Many other successes followed over the years. And Lycoming fans thrilled to the play of players such as Vince Leta, Hal Judis, Al Wilson, Rich Henninger and Ron Travis. But gradually, as new buildings sprang up around Hilltop and the seminary evolved into the college in 1947, the old gym began to show its age. Built originally for about 300 students, it was asked to accommodate many, many more. But the once "spacious" gym floor was cramped and its seating crowded.

Although Hilltop is being replaced by the new physical education center, it will not succumb to the demolition hall. The art department plans to convert the old gymnasium into a fine arts building. The swimming pool will be filled with sand and used as a casting pit for a metal sculpture foundry.

The building remains structurally sound, despite its age. Its granite and brick walls have withstood the North-Central Pennsylvania winters well. Standing just north of the new gym, Hilltop will remain as a reminder of the past athletic accomplishments and the storied history of the college.

Tuition: continued

Since 1970, the consumer price index (CPI) has increased 97.2 percent while the DPI has risen 119 percent. The cost of attending Lycoming, meanwhile, has risen 83 percent from the total 1970-71 fees of $3,000. This means the college has been able to keep increases below the inflation rate. And in terms of the rise in personal income, it can be argued that it is less expensive to attend Lycoming than a decade ago.

The college has been able to keep increases below the inflation rate only by stretching dollars as far as they will go and tightening its belt wherever possible. This belt-tightening has included eliminating positions deemed no longer essential to the operation of the college.

For example, since 1970 the cost of fuel oil and insurance has more than tripled. The cost of electricity and food has more than doubled.

Of course, the college also has realized that many parents of its students have faced similar increases in their cost of living while possibly even losing some of their purchasing power. It is for the students of these parents that the college has offered a generous student aid program--a program that ranks as one of the best in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Blumer said that the college will continue to offer the program. He added that only one other college in the state has offered a higher proportion of its operating income for scholarships and other aid.

Commencement will continue to have family flavor

By Cindy L. Bell, '82

When 12 seniors pick up their diplomas at commencement May 4, it won't be the first time a member of their families has gathered in a Lycoming College sheepskin. In most cases, it was a parent or parents who started the family tradition.

Mark Fultz, a business administration major from Rochester, N. Y., had no intention of attending Lycoming, where his father, Daniel G. Fultz '57 and now a member of the college board of trustees, earned a degree. But a last-minute change in his plans to pursue an Air Force career lead him to Lycoming and Williamsport, where he was born and lived for several years.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "they (the college) tore down my house to build Asbury Hall."

Tim Huff, a psychology major from Tyrone, Pa., is the fourth member of his family to attend Lycoming. His father, the Rev. Norman E. Huff '57, began the tradition. It has been followed by his mother, Anna Mae '75, and brother, Gary '79. His sister, Susan '82, is the fifth member.

During Tim's senior year in high school, his family lived in Salladasburg, a village 20 miles west of Williamsport. His brother, then a freshman, was a member of the college choir so frequent trips were made to the campus to hear performances. Tim became interested and applied. "We lived nearby and my brother was here," he said, explaining why he chose to enroll at Lycoming. "Also, we are a very close family."

Joanne Long, of Johnstown, Pa. also is following a long lineage started by her grandfather, John W. Long, who served as Lycoming's president from 1921 to 1955. Her father, Henry Long '56, and sister, Cindy '79, preceded her.

Joanne's family lived in Williamsport during her senior year in high school so she decided to try Lycoming for a year. She liked it and never left.

For Laurie Leshner, a biology-medical technology major from Williamsport, the college's proximity also lead her to enroll, although until February of her senior year in high school she wasn't coming to Lycoming. Her father, Robert Leshner '57, didn't push the school on her. But she realized after examining Lycoming that it was for her.

"The school offered what I wanted in the med-tech program; they gave me all the aid I needed, and besides," she said, "my boy-friend lived nearby."

The word "Lycoming" wasn't even in Jorge Gonzalez's vocabulary a few years ago. At 16, he came to the United States from Puerto Rico as an exchange student, living with the Rev. Carl and Janet Hill, both '62, of Bedford, Pa. They invited him to finish his education under their roof.

He selected Lycoming over Penn State and Pittsburgh because of its small size and its biology department. Jorge is sure he made the right decision because he has been accepted into Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn.

From this photo, it appears that Steve Gold never had a chance. He was ticketed for Lycoming College right from the start.

Pamela Ernst, a sociology major from Doylestown, Pa., has had contact with Lycoming since birth. Both of her parents, John '58 and Nancy Ernst, grew up in Williamsport and attended Lycoming. Her father is the president of the Lycoming College Alumni Association.

Pam recalls frequent trips to the campus when she was a child to attend activities such as Homecoming. Her decision to enroll at Lycoming was her own. "I thought about going to other places," she said, "but the final decision was mine."

Just as Pam Ernst did, Dann Poukish, a psychology major from Bridgeville, Del., was a frequent visitor to the campus as a child. His parents, the Rev. Charles and Joyce (Mittman) Poukish '56, brought him to many college events when they lived in Pottsdam, N. Y.

His family eventually moved to Maryland where he commuted to Salisbury State College for two years. He transferred to Lycoming in 1979 to complete his education at his parent's alma mater.

also approved changing the name of the Department of Mathematics to the Department of Mathematical Sciences, which will offer the new major.

It is because of the popularity and tremendous growth in computer science that the college has decided to offer a program leading to a B.A. To accommodate the expected increase in students choosing the new major, the college began installing a new larger computer system and affiliated equipment early last summer. That system is being used primarily right now to store administrative, admissions and development

The first time Steve Gold, of Ickesburg, Pa., stepped on campus was the first day of his freshman year. Now he seldom leaves, calling Lycoming his "home away from home." A business administration major, Steve became acquainted with the college through his father, the Rev. James Gold '54.

Although Steve doesn't know why he selected Lycoming, he is sure his father didn't force it on him. "Dad stressed my own independence in picking a school," he said.

"I have relatives and friends here," said Lynn Ohl, a criminal justice major from Bainbridge, N. Y. "But I never thought I'd end up at Lycoming."

Her family lived in Williamsport for awhile and she recalls attending the graduation of her father, William Ohl '69. During her senior year in high school, she applied to various schools. Ironically, it was an aunt who attended Penn State who suggested that Lynn enroll at Lycoming.

Tom Woodruff, Jr., a theatre arts major, is another senior who has been in long contact with Lycoming since his father, Thomas Woodruff '52 settled the family in Montoursville. As a freshman, Tom enrolled at Lycoming intending to stay only a year before transferring to New York University to major in film. But after three weeks in New York City, he decided to return home and finish his education at Lycoming.

"Lycoming was convenient and it's local," he said. "And I didn't like living in New York City."

Lycoming was the "obvious choice" for Drew Nowak, a political science major from New Cumberland, Pa., because it best suited his financial situation, he said. A small amount of pressure from his mother, Jackie (Snyder) Nowak '58, helped though.

Another Nowak will be carrying on the tradition next fall when his sister, Deidre, enrolls at Lycoming.

Another senior who got the "Lycoming plug" is Sandy Musheno, of Montoursville. Her father, Robert Musheno '53, said "It was a good campus," Sandy recalls. Besides, her family lived close by, making Lycoming a convenient choice.

The 12 seniors are not the only students at Lycoming who are following a family tradition. There are 49 juniors, sophomores, freshmen and special or part-time students who learned about Lycoming through family ties. This is sure to mean that commencements at Lycoming will continue to have a family flavor to them.

Computer science: New major on campus

Although computer science courses have been taught at Lycoming since the mid-1960's, a full-fledged major in computer science will be offered for the first time fall.

The faculty approved the creation of the new major at its February meeting. It records, although students in computer science classes do have access to it and the older, smaller system.

To handle the larger classes, the college will add six new terminals before the fall term. Five new courses also will be added to the current four-class curriculum.

To help teach those classes, the department is searching for a faculty member who holds a doctorate in mathematics with at least a master's in computer science. The new instructor will fill an existing vacancy in the mathematics department.

business administration major from Pittsford, N. Y., was honored for his outstanding performance on the swimming team. Shea, a senior business administration major from Oreland, Pa., was honored for her achievement on the field hockey team. Dugan, a junior history major from Philadelphia, was cited for his achievement as a member of the men's basketball team.

The Gillette Foreign Language Awards in French, German and Spanish were presented, respectively, to Nancy J. Harman, a junior French, business administration and economics major from Wellsboro; Karen M. Collins, a senior German and economics major from Lebanon, Pa.; and Nadine K. Firsching, a senior Spanish major from Bristol, Pa., and Theresa A. Muller, a senior biology major from Drexel Hill, Pa.

Douglas P. Raack, a senior accounting major from Washington, N. J. received the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountant's Award. Robert S. Williams, a special accounting major from Cogan Station, Pa., received the Durant Furey Memorial Award in accounting.

Gregory J. McDonald, a senior business administration and history major from Mansfield, received two awards: The Wall Street Journal Award in Business Administration and the Senior Scholarship Prize in History.

Edward J. Norris, a freshman biology major from Williamsport, Pa., received the CRC Freshman Chemistry Achievement Award. Another chemistry award, the AIC Student Honor Award in Chemistry given by the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Chemists, went to Mark E. Smith, a senior biology and chemistry major from Newtown, Pa.

Faith McGill, a senior English major from Coalport, Pa., shared the John P. Graham Award in English with Tara McCue, a senior English and psychology major from West Hartford, Conn. Miss McGill also received the first Dan D. Gustafson Award in Writing, named in honor of a former faculty member who died suddenly last summer.

Paul Roman, a senior history and political science major from Williamsport, received the Research and Writing Prize in History.

Two choir awards, the Civic Choir Award in Music and the Walter Melver Award, went, respectively, to Stephen W. Gold, a senior business administration major from Ickesburg, Pa., and Lynne S. Tomkinson, a senior interdisciplinary major from Westborough, Mass. The latter award recognizes the choir member who contributes most to campus life in activities other than choir.

The Book Award in Political Science went to Robert W. Bucknam, Jr., a junior history and political science major from Bargaintown, N. J.

Patricia Nezelak, a junior business administration major from Endwell, N. Y., received the annual Women of Lyncoming Scholarship. She also was tapped for membership in Iruska, an honor society that recognizes juniors who are very active on campus. Other juniors tapped for Iruska include Mark Todd, a psychology major from Frederick, Md.; Howard McMahon, a political science major from Dalton, Pa.; Paul DeJoseph, a biology major from Willingboro, N. J.; Richard Burd, a sociology major from Lock Haven, Pa.; Mark Abram, a theatre arts major from Newton Square, Pa., and Stephanie Jones, a communications major from Schwenksville, Pa.

Service to Lyncoming Awards were given to Thomas Stavoy, a senior biology major from Williamsport; William Miller, a senior political science and philosophy major from Petersburg, Pa.; Jeffrey Burd, a senior communications major from Pennington, N. J., and Tammy Woodward, a special English major from Endicott, N. Y.

In addition to the students, the Rev. John Tamahus, chaplain to Roman Catholic students on campus, received an award--the Makisu Award. Given by the Student Association of Lyncoming College, it recognizes a sincere interest in students and student government.

Members of the Phi Kappa Phi national honor society also were recognized. And charters were presented to the two newest honorary societies on campus, Beta Beta Beta biology honorary and Phi Sigma Tau philosophy honorary.

The 1980 edition of the Arrow, the college yearbook, was dedicated to Mrs. Dorothy Streeter, manager of the campus bookstore, and Debra D'Aguillo, associate dean of student services.

Dr. Blumer also presented a certificate to the choir from The Protestant Hour, the national radio show for which the choir has taped three performances. Those concerts will be heard in May and June.

Honors societies open chapters at college

Two more national honor societies, Beta Beta Beta, the society for biology, and Phi Sigma Tau, the society in philosophy, have established chapters at Lyncoming College.

Thirty-nine students and faculty members were inducted into Tri-Beta April 8. At that ceremony, Dr. Al Schroeder, regional representative and installation officer from Gettysburg College, presented the charter to Dr. Dan O. King, assistant professor of biology and chapter adviser.

The first members of Phi Sigma Tau will be initiated into the chapter later this spring, according to Dr. Stephen R. Griffith, an associate professor of philosophy and chapter adviser. The college's application for a charter has been approved by the executive council of the honor society and ratified by a vote of all society chapters.

Center seeks deposits for summer job bank

Alumni who know of summer jobs at their places of employment are asked to fill out the form below and mail it to the Career Development Center on campus.

The center is trying to find career-related summer jobs for students in what is expected to be a tight job market. Many students use these jobs to clarify their career goals and to help finance their educations.

New art gallery opens amid Japanese splendor

Amid intricately detailed woodcut prints, the flowing robes of a classical Kabuki dancer and the rhythmic strains of ancient Japanese music, Lycoming College opened its new art gallery in the Academic Center library March 29.

More than 475 persons attended the opening, which featured a completely Japanese theme. In honor of the occasion, Williamsport Mayor Stephen Lucasi even proclaimed that Saturday "Art of Japan Day" in the city.

The gallery opened at 7:30 p.m. with an exhibit of Japanese prints from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew K. Grugan, of Williamsport. At 8:30 p.m., Sachiyo Ito, a renowned dancer and instructor at New York University and Fusako Yoshida, a master of the koto, a traditional Japanese string instrument, entertained in the Arena Theatre before an overflow crowd. The performers were accompanied to the campus by Yukio Sugano, consul in charge of cultural affairs for the Consulate General of Japan in New York City, which arranged the performance.

Dr. Frederick E. Blumer, president, presented Mr. Sugano with the mayor's proclamation prior to the start of the performance. After the show, a reception was held in Pennington Lounge of the Academic Center.

The Grugan collection consists of 19th and 20th Century prints that exemplify the finest in Japanese printmaking. Prints by Hiroshige and Sekino are included in the collection, which will be on exhibit at the gallery until May.

Ms. Ito's credits include performances at the Lincoln Center in New York City and the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles. She has been reviewed by the New York Times, Village Voice and Our Town. Ms. Yoshida's credits include concerts, private recitals and radio and TV broadcasts throughout the United States. She has been reviewed by the New York Times, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Los Angeles Times and the San Francisco Examiner and Chronicle.

The art gallery will serve as the college's permanent display center. It will be the major gallery in Williamsport. A tentative list of 1980-81 shows is being put together. The list includes shows by local artists and artists from outside the college community.

Heavy rain fell all day but it didn't dampen the spirits of those persons visiting the college's new, modern art gallery. The gallery includes about 1,800 square feet of space. It is open during the library hours.

Sachiyo Ito enchanted the crowd that packed the Arena Theatre.

Campus Notes

STAN WILK, a member of the department of sociology-anthropology, has been informed that a note on science and humanism in anthropology has been accepted for publication in the American Anthropological Association's newsletter. He also has had a paper, "The Individual and Symbolic Anthropology: The Teaching of a Human Life," accepted for presentation at the 20th annual meeting of the Northeastern Anthropological Association. The meeting will be held at the University of Massachusetts later this spring.

ROBERT ZACCARIA, a member of the biology department, was the guest speaker at the Stripping Ceremony for the Williamsport Hospital School of Nursing's Class of 1982.

His address was titled, "When Do You Stop Being a Student Nurse?"

DAVID JEX, a member of the music department, has been commissioned by Pro Musica Chamber Music of Columbus, a small symphonic group, to prepare a new work for its first program of the 1980-81 season.

Seniors strike oil

Three senior accounting majors at Lycoming College have struck oil in the job market. They have accepted offers to assume posts at the accounting headquarters of Continental Oil Company, Inc.

Bryce E. Beeman, of Kingsley, Pa., Michael R. Stevens, of White House Station, N. J., and Vieden Zahariev, of Cheektowaga, N. Y., will report to Conoco's office in Ponca City, Okla., several weeks after they are graduated May 4. They are the first Lycoming students to be placed at Conoco.

Their selection by the oil company is very gratifying, said Logan A. Richmond, chairman of the accounting department, because it has been recruiting on campus for only two years. To choose three students in the same year is even more of an accomplishment, he said.

Debaters 'outstanding'

Two Lycoming College Debate Society members carted off the top awards at the annual Wells College Model Congress held in March at Aurora, N. Y.

W. Glen Lauber, a senior from Randolph, N. J., won the "Outstanding Senator Award," Howard McMahon, a junior from Dalton, won the "Outstanding Representative Award."

Seven other debaters also attended the congress, which was attended by approximately 100 students from schools all across the East Coast, including Smith, Hofstra, Bucknell and the U. S. Military Academy.

Bella Abzug, former congresswoman from New York, was the keynote speaker at the congress. Sissy Farenthold, president of Wells College, presided.

Alumni Weekend Calendar

ALUMNI WEEKEND - 1980

May 2, 3, 4

A SPECIAL WELCOME to our reunion classes
The Alumni Association Executive Board has chosen to call reunions of the following classes:

1920 - 60th
1925 - 55th
1930 - 50th
1935 - 45th
1940 - 40th

1945 - 35th
1950 - 30th
1955 - 25th
1960 - 20th
1965 - 15th

1970, 1975, and 1980 classes will hold their reunions at Huntington, October 4, 1980. Classes one year before and one year after all reunion classes are urged to join in the reunion this year. Campus friendships usually span several years.

All of us at the college look forward to greeting you on May 2, 3, & 4. Under our new academic calendar, graduates will be held this year on May 4th.

Reserve the date now, and plan to return to the campus for an enjoyable weekend - meet old friends, and relive some of those memorable days at old SMC - "Junior College" or "Lyc." An interesting program has been arranged.

There will be opportunity for you to meet the president of Lycoming College during the weekend and learn what plans he has for the future of the college.

The detailed schedule is as follows:

FRIDAY, May 2

1:00 P. M.

7-11 off 13th annual Alumni-Faculty Golf Tournament at White Deer Golf Club, Route 25, six miles east of Williamsport. Registration fee $6.50, includes greens fee and tournament fee. Reservations for golf tournament must be received by May 1st. Non-golfers welcome. Lunch is available at the club.

6:00 P. M.

The Class of 1930 and the Class of 1940 will hold a dinner in the Wagner-Harman Dining Room (often called the private dining room) of the college. Members of those classes should use the reservation form below. Wellard Guffy '50, Jackie Brouse Griggs '50, and R. Andrew Lady '49 are coordinating this event.

8:00-9:30 P. M.

All alumni who have returned to the campus are welcome at an informal reception in the lobby of Long Hall. Copies of the yearbook for various reunion classes will be on display along with other pictures.

SATURDAY, May 3

10:30 A. M. - Noon

11:00 - 12:00 Noon

12:00 Noon

1:00 P. M.

2:00 - 3:00 P. M.

3:15 - 4:15 P. M.

6:00 P. M.

8:30 P. M.

SUNDAY, May 4

10:45 A. M.

2:00 P. M.

REGISTRATION - Academic Center, Pennington Lounge. Coffee and doughnuts will be served. Some members of the faculty, past and present, will be there to greet you. Meet others from your class.

CHOIR REHEARSAL for all choir alumni in Clarke, Room 11 - Mr. Melver will rehearse "The Sanctification" and "Break Bread." He will direct the choir, past and present, in the closing part of the Saturday night concert.

BRUNCH - Wertz Student Center - All alumni wearing name tags from registration are guests of the college.

CLASS REUNIONS and REUNION PICTURES in rooms assigned on the 2nd floor of the Academic Center. Pictures may be ordered.

AFTERNOON ATTRACTIONS

College receives copy of original deed

A copy of Lycoming College's original deed has been presented to it by the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the United Methodist Church. It will be framed and hung in the Long Administration Building.

Dr. Neill McNall, archivist for the conference, presented the copy to Dr.

Frederick E. Blumer, president. McNall was accompanied by Dr. Loring Priest, emeritus professor of history at Lycoming and its unofficial archivist.

The deed, drawn up in 1840, refers to that parcel of land upon which the west wing of the former Old Main was built, according to Priest. It is approximately the site upon which the new Physical Education and Recreation Center is being constructed.

The land was purchased by the former Williamsport Academy, the forerunner of the college, from Peter and Elizabeth Vanderbelt, heirs to Michael Ross, the founder of Williamsport. With the purchase, the academy moved from the corner of West Third and West Streets, its original location.

The original deed is being preserved by the conference for the college, Priest said. Because of its age and fragile condition, it is being protected and sealed in a vault at a Greater Williamsport bank, where it was available to the college at any time.

Dean, 8 students join Phi Kappa Phi

Dean Shirley Van Marter and eight students were initiated into Phi Kappa Phi national honor society March 22. The spring initiation ceremony featured an address by Dr. Dennis O'Brien, president of Bucknell University.

Joining Dr. Van Marter as initiates were Paul Roman of Williamsport, Sandra Musheno, of Montoursville; Gayle Allison, of Glen Rock; David Argall, of Nequehoning; Randall Brown, of Middletown, N. J.; Nadine Firsching, of Bristol; Richard Merio, of Bethlehem and Paul Saltwick, of Glen Rock, N. J.

A dinner preceded the initiation ceremony. After the ceremony and a business meeting, members were entertained by the Alpha Omega playgroup, a traveling theatrical group.

To be elected to Phi Kappa Phi, members had to meet certain academic standards and receive a two-thirds vote of the chapter membership. The current membership is comprised of 15 faculty members and administrators and 17 students.

Track, tennis teams struggling; golfers yet to open season

Coach Pat Schenmyer's track team opened the short spring sports season at Lycoming March 29 with a triangular meet at Dickinson College. The team took five first places but still came in third behind Dickinson with 72.5 points and Messiah with 70.5 points. The Warriors netted 30 points.

The track team competed in another triangular April 2 at Juniata College with similar results. It took five first places but came in third behind Juniata with 90 points and Baptist Bible with 50 points. The Warriors accumulated 39 points.

Coach Phil Christman's tennis team opened with four matches in five days. All of them resulted in 9-0 whitewashings for the Warrior netters. A very strong Bloomsburg State College team blanked the Warriors in the April 1 opener. Elizabethtown, Scranton and Western Maryland matched Bloomsburg on April 2, 3 and 5.

Still, the 0-4 start for Christman's netters doesn't have the first-year coach ready to hang up his whistle. Although it hasn't shown in the scores, he said, the very young squad is showing improvement. It could surprise and win a few matches by the end of the season, he said, something the 1979 squad couldn't do.

Rain washed out the golf team's first two matches, scheduled for March 31 and April 2. As a result, Coach Bob Foreman's squad was scheduled to open the season April 8 against Lebanon Valley and Kings in one of two matches at home.

His team compiled a 1-11 record last year. But he feels that this year's team is stronger simply because it has more depth. "We should be able to shoot consistently through seven people," Foreman said, "rather than the three or four we've had in past years."
